

INVESTIGATING LITERARY KNOWLEDGE IN THE MAKING OF ENGLISH TEACHERS PROJECT LAUNCH

- Which texts have had the greatest impact on your life?
How many of these did you study at secondary school?
What do you hope your students will get from your literature teaching?
What keeps your interest in this area alive?

Investigating Literary Knowledge in the Making of English Teachers is a groundbreaking four year national research project about how literary knowledge is understood and how literature is experienced by Australian students and teachers. The project is funded by an Australian Research Council Discovery Project grant.

Come along to the project launch to hear from the research team and discuss English teaching and the role of literature in subject English.

Lead researchers

- Ass. Professor Larissa McLean Davies
The University of Melbourne
- Emeritus Professor Brenton Doecke,
Deakin University
- Professor Philip Mead
University of Western Australia
- Professor Wayne Sawyer
Western Sydney University
- Professor Lyn Yates
The University of Melbourne

Friday 2 December

5.30-6.30pm followed by refreshments
Frank Tate Room
Level 9, 100 Leicester Street
Melbourne Graduate School of Education
The University of Melbourne

RSVP: To Dr Lucy Buzacott
lucy.buzacott@unimelb.edu.au or by clicking here.

